BINOMIALS

BINOMIALS is an art exhibition that forms part of the ninth edition of the International Deep-Sea Coral Congress. It originated in the friendship between a scientist and an artist and in a long-standing exchange of letters, giving rise to a dialogue between art and deep-sea research.

The exhibition revolves around deep-sea corals and the mysterious, still largely unknown world they inhabit. Through letters, conversations, and encounters with marine ecologists, established artists, and emerging artists, scientific discoveries and experiences are transformed into visual, material, and sound-based works.

Corals, witnesses to the unfolding of life for more than 200 million years, take center stage in this journey from the surface into the deep: a space where knowledge, experience, and creation converge.

BINOMIALS invites us to inhabit this shared territory between art and science; to discover, feel, and interpret our relationship with the marine environment and with other forms of life; and to recognize ourselves, amid its lights and shadows, in the depths of the ocean.
